Introduction

Slogan is a sentence or phrase that expresses an idea. It is used by institutions, companies, things, etc. Slogan is used to express an idea, aims or purpose. It is also can be in spoken or written text. Like other institutions, school also has its own role in society. As we know, that school is the place for teaching – learning process, associating with other people, getting new experience and knowledge, so school has very important role in society. As the important institution, school environment has to give good influence for its students and teachers. It influences students' character development.

Nowadays, many schools are fixing their environment by building beautiful garden and also hanging slogans in every isle, class or park. Schools use slogan to express their idea and aims towards goal of its institution and educational. Slogan is not also as language material but also as advice, motivation, warning, etc. It is also used as students' attitude builder. The referential meaning of slogan is the understanding of society towards slogan based on the sentence or phrase.

Slogan contains sentences or phrases that express idea, aim or purpose. In this study, the researcher has fifteen school slogans; 5 slogans are in Indonesian language and 10 slogans are in English language. The researcher is interested in analyzing the speech act meaning of those slogans.

According to John Austin, illocutionary act is the act of doing something. In this research, the researcher uses John Searle's theory about speech act. Searle focuses on illocutionary that proposed by Austin. That is why, slogan is not only written, but indirectly is asked to do that.

Theoretical Framework

Slogan

Slogan is a group of words that promise a reward in a dramatic ways which is easy to read, easy to say and easy to remember (Urdang and Robbin, 1984: 18). Slogan used to illustrate a product and the languages of slogan represent the particular product. A slogan is a memorable motto or phrase used in a clan, political, commercial, religious, and other context as a repetitive expression of an idea or purpose, with the goal of persuading members of the public or a more defined target group (Wikipedia). The Oxford Dictionary of English defines a slogan as "a short and striking or memorable phrase used in advertising." (Stevenson, 2010) A slogan usually has the attributes of being memorable, very concise and appealing to the audience. (Lim & Loi, 2015). These attributes are necessary in a slogan, as it is only a short phrase. Therefore, it is necessary for slogans to be memorable, as well as concise in what the organization or brand is trying to say and appealing to who the organization or brand is trying to reach.

School Slogan

School slogans can be on a variety of topics relating to School such as child education slogans, anti-bullying slogans, reading slogans and more. School slogans can encourage students to try their best, get along with others and more.

An educational slogan provides a representation of the values and beliefs that drive daily school functions and special activities. Educational slogans are also a simple way to advertise the purpose and mission statement of a school or college

Speech Act

The theory of speech acts were introduced by the professor of Harvard University (1956), J. L. Austin, then those theories were booked by J. O. Urmson (1962) entitled How To Do Thing With Word. In 1969, Austin's student, John Searle wrote the book entitled Speech Act: an Essay in the Philosophy of Language.

According to John Austin

The philosophers and the traditional linguists argued that language is only as an activity of saying something. On the other hand, language is a tool of telling information. After Austin introduced his speech act's theory, he divided it into two parts (statements). For instance, someone tells that:

- a. National Monument is 125 meters
- b. I name this ship the Queen Elizabeth

The (a) statement implies that someone says something. It is called constative utterance or statement because it is only telling about something which truth/falsity can be judged

While the (b) statement implies that someone says and does something. It is called performative utterance or statement because it is not only telling but doing something also and which do not contain truth/falsity.

So, speech act is utterance of someone psychologically and can be seen from utterance meaning of that utterance. That speech act will form a speech event. Then, speech act and speech event become two symptoms that are on one process, communication process.

Austin (1962) divided performative utterance (statement) in three different act:

- a. Locutionary acts
It is the production of sounds and words with meaning. On the other hand, it is the act of saying something. For example: Donald Trump is President of USA
- b. Illocutionary acts
It is the issuing of an utterance with conventional communicative force achieved “in saying”. On the other hand, it is the act of doing something. For example: The ground is slippery. It means that we warn someone to be careful. According to Gunawan (1994), verbs that represent illocutionary act are report, warn, announce, ask, suggest.
- c. Perlocutionary acts
It is the actual effect achieved “by saying”. On the other hand, it is the act of effective someone. For example: feed the cat when I’m gone. It means we persuade someone to feed the cat. According to Gunawan (1994), verbs that represent perlocutionary act are persuade, convince, scare, insult.

According to John Searle

Searle’s Speech Acts (1969) builds upon Austin’s work to propose a systematic framework by which to incorporate speech acts into linguistic theory. Searle (1969: 21) proposes that “the speech act is the basic unit of communication”. Speech act rules are part of linguistic competence: language can be used for speech acts because people share rules that create the acts that say what is meant.

Searle classifies different kinds of conditions (rules) according to what aspects of text and context is focused upon in the condition of rule; the different conditions also overlap with the different components of a speech act.

Searle develops and extends the speech act theory that Austin introduced. Searle focuses on the illocutionary acts performed by the speaker. He divided speech acts in five classes:

1. Representative (assertive) is speech acts that commit a speaker to the truth of the expressed proposition. On the other hand, it is speech acts that bound a speaker to the truth. For example: saying, reporting and mentioning
2. Directive is speech acts that are to cause the hearer to take a particular action. For example: begging, suggesting, requesting and challenging
3. Commissives is speech acts that commit a speaker to some future action. For example: promising and threatening
4. Expressive is speech acts that express the speaker’s attitudes and emotions towards the proposition. For example: congratulations, excuses and thanks
5. Declaration is speech acts that change the reality in accord with the proposition of the declaration. On the other hand, it is speech act that done by a speaker to create a new thing. For example: baptisms, pronouncing someone guilty or pronouncing someone husband and
